

University of Utah MSW Program Prerequisite Course Suggestions at In-State Institutions

The following list includes courses offered at Utah colleges and universities that fulfill the MSW prerequisite requirements. Courses not on this list may also be considered, including those taken at out-of-state institutions. Complete this form to submit a transcript and request a prerequisite review, or email MSW@utah.edu to inquire about other courses. Please provide the course name, course description for the catalog year of when the course was completed, and the syllabus, if possible.

To learn more about registration requirements and course availability, please contact the institution directly.

1. Human Development Across the Lifespan (birth through end of life)

This course should cover conception/birth to old age/death in terms of biological, emotional, social, cognitive, and psychological development. It is often called Developmental Psychology. It is suggested to take a one-semester course that covers the entire lifespan, though a series of development courses that cover the entire lifespan (often in three to four different classes) can also be accepted. This list is not exhaustive. There may be several courses that fulfill the above requirements that are not listed. See the top of this document for instructions on inquiring about courses not listed.

One course is required unless otherwise noted.

The courses must be taken for credit receiving a letter grade and can be taken online, in-person, or hybrid.
